Compliance is required to bill for any and every aspect of patient care, even when not participating in specific health plans and/or programs. Audits of a physician practice's billing and coding is an ongoing and burgeoning initiative that all physicians must be aware of and prepared for, and the risks must be managed aggressively.

Building and complying with good billing and coding policies and procedures that accurately reflect the care provided and provide the mandated level of medical documentation to support the level of care billed must be the new foundation of every medical practice.

Physicians and their practice staff need to be aware of the "red flags" that would or could trigger an audit and bring about the potential request for significant amounts in the repayment of fees, as well as the unanticipated- and all too often overlooked- potentially devastating legal consequences.

At the end of this seminar, physician participants will be able to:

1. Identify the potential red flags in their billing and coding practices.
2. Develop practical solutions to minimize the risk of an audit.
3. Review and understand the documentation requirements to support services provided and apply that knowledge to the appropriate code selection.
